DIRECTORS' NOTE

 Greetings Adventurers! We are so excited for you to see this fantastical show! We're so proud of everything it's become over the last few months, and how hard the cast, crew, and everyone else involved has worked to make this production possible. When we started working on this show, we knew we wanted to highlight how much it celebrates the importance of being unabashedly oneself. She Kills Monsters refuses the narrative of "fundamentally, we're the same," which erases how our differences enrich our lives and the lives of others. It doesn't judge if you're most yourself when you're an elf, a paladin, or a high school English teacher. Through this production, we wanted to show how many different ways we can find our truest selves. How family is both where we come from, and who we bring with us throughout our lives. While this show is about two sisters, it's also about found family, and the power in having a family that lets you shine brightest. This show's prioritization of love and acceptance is a message we feel is universally vital. Honoring and celebrating difference, both in others and in yourself, is a message we both really value, and something we hope you carry with you after this show. So laugh, have fun, and roll for initiative! She Kills Monsters is a critical hit.
