A NOTE FROM THE DIRECTORS

When we started working on Chicago, we wanted to create an experience that breaks the traditional rules of theatre for a show that already ignores the existence of a fourth wall. Originally going for the aesthetic of a jazz club, during the process we realized how meta the show is and we decided to push it farther. We decided to tear the boundary between the audience, the pit, and the stage and create an experience like no other. We've run on the idea of "20s themed" versus "20s period" welcoming the audience to the fun of the 1920s, while drawing to attention the timelessness and relevance this show has today. Media is a point of contention in society today, and though Chicago is famously fun and raunchy, it also criticizes and questions how influential media is, and how susceptible people are as consumers of media. We created a spectacle performance and a modern twist on a timeless classic.

Please enjoy.
